* _The Adobe Photoshop CS6 Bible_ (published by Peachpit Press) is a beginner's guide that enables you to get up to speed in basic Photoshop application. ## BASIC EDITING * Adobe Photoshop CS6 enables you to create and manipulate raster images. To open an image, click Open on the Photoshop menu, and then choose Open from the drop-down menu. Using an image as a background requires the image to be in Photoshop's native format, the _PSD_ format, which is a native Photoshop format for converting files from other software applications. The image opens in Photoshop with the canvas stretched to the default size of 3600 pixels wide by 2400 pixels tall (unless the image that is opened is a _Smart Object_ discussed later). You can see the editing controls on the canvas in the Editor window. These control all basic image-editing tools and settings for the image. You can use the tools to create, scale, and crop your image, all without having to open the layers panel. If your image is too large to fit the space allotted for it, you can use the Zoom tool on the left side of the editor to set the size of the image. Click and drag to zoom in and out as needed. Click the Zoom tool's Zoom button (shown in the margin) or press Ctrl+minus or +plus to zoom in or out. (Hold down the key to zoom in and out faster.)

"That's how the culture in this town has been for the past four decades: Let's go! Let's go!" "That's how the culture in this town has been for the past four decades: Let's go! Let's go!" A Plano, Texas, high school's principal sent home a newsletter that included three racially-charged and offensive diagrams. The documents were allegedly created for the school's Back to School Committee meeting, according to USA Today. The newsletter included one diagram on how to "Help a White Student" and another on how to "help a White Female Student." The third illustration was a diagram on how to "Help a Black Student." Students from the high school said they found the drawings "offensive." Some found them "tasteless and demeaning." The principal, who has not been named, apologized for including the offensive material. According to the newspaper, the principal said the drawings represented the "fuel" that makes students talk about race. "It was something that was not intended at all," Principal Christopher Noble said, according to PlanoSchools.com. However, four members of the committee said the material was written on April 2, 2017 — more than two months before the initial offense. The drawings were supposed to be printed on a website for students. Samantha Pydar, president of the local chapter of the NAACP, said the school has a long way to go when it comes to fighting racism. "It's time the school system actually put their Black and Brown students at the forefront of the meeting," Pydar said. "It's time the school system actually put their Black and Brown students at the forefront of the meeting," Pydar said. "[It] points out that it's never okay to be racist in any capacity." The principal said he was disappointed about the incident. "We regret the misunderstanding and are sorry to have offended our parents, friends and community," the principal said.Q: Dynamic Programming Recurrence Relation I have two functions: $f(a,b,n)$ $f(a,b,0) = 0$ if $a > b$ $f(a,b,1) = f(a-1,b,n) + 1$ if a

Q: Can't load module ntl I'm trying to use loxodrome on a certain website. It worked fine, but then the webpage changed the theme, so I had to edit the file ntl.js and delete the line module.exports = module; to make it work again. Now it gives me the error "Can't find module "ntl" referenced by (path,true, f)" whenever I try to open a webpage. However, everything seems normal: the HTML is being loaded and so on. Has anyone a similar problem? Is there some way to load the correct version without having to open the file myself and delete the line? A: I don't know why this fixed it but this is the way I solved it: In Loxodrome.js, on line 615, change module.exports = module; to module.exports = module; The hunch is that by adding the semicolon, the module is already defined. Also, be sure to use the correct path, not localhost. For me, this means that I should use: var path = getPath(window.location); var config = require(path + 'modules/config'); as opposed to: var path = getPath(window.location); var config = require(path + './modules/config'); and var server = require('http').createServer(config); as opposed to var server = require('http').createServer(config); Hope this helps!
